Once there was a Graduate
Fussy over where he ate,
"Gosh," he thought, "I'm in a hole!"
Then he tried the "Sugar Bowl";
Thought it just the place to dine;
There you'll find him all the time.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN THE CHANGING WORLD

(Maplewood Prize Essay)

YEARS ago it was an accepted fact that the woman belonged in the home. She was not seeking new fields to conquer, nor new laurels for herself in the professions or in the business world. Among our "grannies", it was an unheard-of thing for a woman of good family to earn her own living. The woman of yesterday never dreamed that some day she would enter public life and win her way on an equal footing with men. Such a suggestion would have been met with exclamations of horror—something truly impossible.

But today—how different conditions are! Father now faces the question of providing an education for his children quite independent of sex. Girls go to college, take their degrees and sally forth to struggle for themselves in the world just as their brothers do. This is the age of "working women". Every day women are being recognized more and more, and earning the respect of men—they are on a plane of equality with them.

However, this state of affairs has not come about suddenly; nor is it wholly the result of woman's discontent with domestic life. Rather it is the outgrowth of the times—the natural progress of woman in the history of the race. That nine women out of ten would prefer marriage and the making of a home, to success in any field, is just as much of a truth today as it was a hundred years ago. Yet the girl goes to college, broadens her outlook, and prepares to enter a profession. Naturally quick and receptive, she is ready to earn her own living as soon as her brother. She becomes absorbed in her work, and she too learns what it means to feel the joy of making herself and her personality felt in the world. She experiences that supreme sense of freedom that comes from directing her own affairs. Her outlook on life has been greatly enlarged; to her, life is bigger, holds more possibilities than ever were dreamed of by her grandmother, who lived contentedly within the four walls of her home—seeing or knowing very little of anything beyond.

The girl of the twentieth century has become strong and self-reliant. She has lost her dependence on men; and sometimes it almost seems as if she has lost her femininity too. And yet this is not true! That a woman can take her place in the world of men, and hew out for herself a living and a position, and yet remain truly feminine to her finger tips, has been proved by some of the foremost women of our age.

Let us go back to Jane Addams as a splendid example of a modern American woman who has been able to take her place in the world and accomplish much public good without losing a trace of her womanliness. Her purpose in life was to do something for humanity—something to help and uplift mankind. On the whole, the reach of this woman's sympathy and understanding is beyond all comparisons wider in its span—comprehending more kind of people—than that of any living public man.

Another famous personage who accomplished much in her chosen field was Clara Barton, a trained nurse, who so efficiently organized the work of the Red Cross Society.

Coming nearer the present, we find scores of women who have become famous. Evangeline Booth, the head of that widely known charitable organization, the Salvation Army, is one of the most outstanding woman leaders of our day.

In the political field we find two very noted women, Miss Frances Perkins, our Secretary of Labor, and Ruth Bryan Owen, our first lady ambassador.

Amelia Earhart! The heroine of the airways! The world's most famous aviatrix! The woman who dared to span the vast Atlantic alone! Who better could represent the science of aviation?

And so we could go on and on, naming many more well-known women in other fields; for there are very few lines of work in which women have not experimented, but even this brief list gives us some idea of "the new woman's" place in the fast changing world. Women have always been a tremendous power in the destiny of the world; and now, more than ever, they are coming forth to exercise this power.

ADDRESS TO THE ATHLETES

"TO the victor belong the spoils" and to our athletes belongs the highest possible praise. You have, by your clean sportsmanship and hearty cooperation, made yourselves a shining example to P. H. S. Whether or not you go on to attain greater heights in athletics, your prowess in this field of endeavor will long be remembered.

The fair damsels and more timorous fellows of P. H. S. have looked up to you, have exalted you. Only by your fairness of play, perseverance, and self-sacrifice could you have received such respect and admiration. Your self-sacrifice meant giving up many a Prom and "date" to pursue loyally your athletic careers.

Your success in football, basketball, baseball, hockey, and track has given the Purple and White many a victory. You have had to swallow many a bitter pill in the form of defeat but you have gallantly stood your ground and taken it on the chin.

And to the feminine athletes of the class may we say, you too have been loyal and persevering. You too have made the June Class of 1935 outstanding for its athletic victories.

It is your duty, athletes, to pass on to the undergraduates of P. H. S. the flaming torch of sportsmanship and cooperation which you have held so high. May you receive all of life's blessings; and in whatever fate may decree for you, may you be successful!

Margaret Flynn

PROPHECY OF THE CLASS OF JUNE, 1935

"HOLD that pose." "Thank you." Upon asking the cameramen, "Duke" Duda and "Bill" McEachron who and for what purpose all the far-famed and notorious persons were meeting, the enterprising young reporter, "Abe" Michelson, we found that the class reunion of the class of June, 1935 was to take place in the year of prosperity, 1935.

Meeting in the Martin Manor, owned by Stanley Martin and managed by Francis Lusignan who had become experienced in management during his three terms as class president, the class of '35 was assured the best of reunions. In gold braid and bright colors, Winston Budrow strutted around as doorman. "Bill" Mann, bouncer extraordinary, awaited a "rushing" business. Clamoring for interviews were Broadway's key-hole peepers, "Don" Landry and Llewellyn Hannigan. Peter Barreca, the Mayor, Robert Stuart, Chairman of the School Board, and Ralph Pignone, a member of the City Council, were on hand as a welcoming committee. Bill Dickson was there, too.

In order to see everything for future disclosure we, who must be nameless, took up positions just inside the door. Among the first to arrive were "Bud" Prodders and "Bud" Holden, Hollywood's leading box-office attractions.

Thomas Enright, sports commentator, entered with many of the athletes he had helped to popularize through his column. The idol of the 1934 World Series was there—smiling "Hal" Williams. "Ted" Skowronski, golf champion, would not trust his clubs to anyone. The winner of the matches at Wimbledon, Helen Weeks, waved cheerfully to her fans. "Tommy" gave us some sporting news. "Ted" Koulgag had just broken a record at Daytona Beach. "Dutch" Slater held the world's heavy weight boxing title. It explains in part his liking for that "food of foods"—the popsicle. "Jerry" Kallman rode the winning horse, Measles, owned by George Krause at the 1935 Kentucky Derby. "Mickey" Flynn, member of the U. S. Olympic swimming team, is writing sports articles for the STUDENT'S PEN.

More celebrities are arriving by the minute. There comes "The Honorable" Harry Morgan, the Chief Justice of the Hinsdale Cattleman's Small Claims Court. He had been detained for some time trying to think up a fit punishment for "Flo" Mofie who had been convicted of causing a depression in Hinsdale by taking the farmer's minds off their work. It sounded like more "I-was-a-poor-little-country-girl" stuff. Harry finally turned her over to his head jailer, "Jack" Fraser, until he had time for more deliberation.

A bus stopping in front brought some more athletically minded persons. First off the bus are "Joe" Majchrowski and "Eddie" Mazzer returning from England where they beat the Prince of Wales at a golf match. Closely behind them tower Warren and Wallace Munson, the clever pair of hockey stars whose work put the Rangers at the top of their League. Why are those two men glaring at each other? Why they're "Tony" Marra and "Frankie" Mlynarczyk! Oh, yes, they are the new coaches of Yale and Harvard respectively and rivalry between those schools in recent years has been very keen. "Red" Palardy is the women's bowling champion. Marion Sinclair has just related for the twenty-third time how she swam out to Alcatraz prison to deliver a message to "Champ" Rubin, the warden.

Our attention was diverted by "Franky" Houldsworth, faithful newsboy, calling, "Extra!" In three inch letters the headlines screamed, "Kordalewski Discovers Cure For Cancer!" How proud we were of Alban Kordalewski! He carried on his research in the laboratories built by that great philanthropist, George H. Becker, Jr.

Further examination of the paper revealed these interesting facts: Virginia Bickford was editor of the Eagle. Mary O'Boyle was advertising manager. George Haylon, printer's devil, informed us that Vivian Lederer was her private secretary.

In the columns of the paper we learned that Lillian Berkeley, recently appointed to the faculty of Tuskegee Institute, was the youngest person to be so honored. Of national interest was the news that the Massachusetts wood-pecker, "Howie" Hunter, had squelched a certain Louisiana kingfish. The Governor of Massachusetts, George Betts, had just declared war on reckless driving. Taxi-driver Fred Hogan looks worried as he reads this.

Walter Burkhardt, in the guise of a Postal Telegraph messenger, delivered three telegrams. They were from members who could not attend. The first one expressed regrets and was signed Florence Board. The second was from Idalane Dresser and read as follows: Just completed pole-to-pole flight Stop Must thaw out Stop Sorry Stop. The last was from "Billy" Nesbit who is travelling round the world on a tramp steamer. He was rounding the Cape of Good Hope but had no hope of being back in time.

A flurry of excitement flashed through the crowd as the great hero of America came in. He was Charles Passe who had saved Claire Germaine from drowning. Somehow she had lost her knowledge of swimming.

Stanley Martin, looking greatly agitated, rushed over to give Martha Maxwell, the telephone girl, some frantic orders. Not wishing to miss anything, we asked Edgar Tufts, the reception clerk, what the commotion was about. He told us that Clark Hamm, the chef, was dining with May Wheeler, a chambermaid. The head-waiter, Arno Lehmann, was so excited by this tid-bit that he was unable to do his work properly. All was settled when Rose Piccini substituted for Clark.

The hotel scene was filled with classmates. In one corner surrounded by feminine members of the class we see William Cuthbertson and John Bartels noted in the past for shyness when these girls were near. Henry Ford's rivals, "Dick" May and "Ken" Mellen, always thinking of business, are selling some of their latest rocket cars.

At the check room the hat check girl, Marie Latimer, has enlisted the services of her friend, Rose Coppolino. Just taking off his coat is Richard Previtali, the banker. Two gold pieces clink together in his pocket showing that the President of our country, Winston Roulier, has restored the U. S. to the gold standard.

A bell boy passes as he pages someone. A second glance discloses "Figgie" Newton in the garb. The name he is calling rings familiar chords. It is Nicholas Mele. Nicholas has recently become owner of a flourishing concern of dime chain letters.

A few steps on a veritable flower garden greeted our eyes. Janet Simpson came forward to attend to our desires. We were trying to make a selection when a voice behind suggested, "Rosemary for Remembrance." We turned to greet Rosemary Cummings appropriately enough. Not very far behind Irving Hughes was lingering.

In comfortable divans sat two prominent economists, Lester Phillips and Albert Secunda, arguing about the Bardwell Tariff which recently passed the House under the authorship of Harry Bardwell, Art Chevette, assistant.

Sauntering towards us with an air of importance Howard Lennox raised his brows at each bit of feminine pulchritude. What a contrast to the time he roamed the halls of P. H. S. as a woman-hater!

Snooping around was the house detective. A familiar crop of red hair and a certain corpulent figure prove him to be "Bud" Ford.

We were attracted by some piano playing in one corner. We could see Ellen Duxbury playing an accompaniment to the Three Rhythm Boys, namely Ernest Cancilla, Milton Chain, and "Dick" De Celles. Waiting her turn is radio's newest blues singer, Sybil Fish. She was "found" during a broadcast of Sol Smuckler's Amateur Hour, sponsored by George Scully and Earl Pilon, manufacturers of answer books guaranteed to cover all quizzes propounded by Marilyn Cooney, new U. S. History teacher at P. H. S.

From Margaret Knight who had acceded to the principalship at the high school we learned that many classmates had become members of the faculty. Virginia Broderick was the head of the Latin Department. Barbara Washburn of the Spanish department had edited some Spanish poems which were being used as text books. In the Household Arts Department were Carolyn Luce and Elizabeth Silvernail. Rolland Langdon has managed to keep down the roof during Chemistry experiments. Monroe Harawitz has succeeded in trisecting an angle and claimed the credit was due to the stimulus of P. H. S. Christine Parker and Ralph Simmons have charge of the girls' and boys' sports respectively. Ruth Thayer is Dean of Girls. Don Guerin is head janitor.

Amid this uproar the hotel orchestra began to play. Richard La Valle led the musicians. Popular songs by Machislaw Ciskowski and Bette Owen were most in demand. Barbara Heidel and "Bunky" Hill showed us the latest dance steps they had devised. Margaret Hawley interpreted some of Ruth St. Denis' dances. Barbara Gamwell was an exponent of the Shawn type. Next Bernard Murphy gave one of his triple-tongued cornet solos. Ray Carmell was prevailed upon to do the class song—"When I Grow Too Old To Graduate," played by music instructor, Arno Lehmann.

Helen Walak gave us news of other members of the class. Eleanor Reynolds has just returned from Hollywood where she starred in "Gold-diggers of 1935" produced by Nicholas Krasiewicz. Dorothy Kolman, the outstanding lexicographer of the age, has sent her latest dictionary to the publishers, Francis Laurin and Dalard LeBlanc, new owners of Doubleday and Doran. Betty Kilian has won a free trip abroad sponsored by Paluxim Soap. Yearning to see Naples again, Genevra Innocenzi was going to accompany her. "Eddie" Wolfe's radical journal contained articles by Roy Nash and Lucia Sloper. Perry Whitman was trying to learn Steve Yuchaki's technique as a gigolo. Greta Williams has given up the study of Spanish to become a home girl. Gregory Ross had strangely enough become friends with Francis Pierce, the only minister the class produced. "Frannie" Roberts and "Smitty" (alias Helen Smith) didn't need the Spring for their interest in each other to develop. "Giddy" Goddeau's occupation has just been revealed. She is ice cream taster for Fro-Joy. Carolyn Cullen owns the largest string of race horses in America. "Jimmy" McGovern has made a considerable fortune in the manufacture of pencils which can be stretched out to last the rest of the term. He is noted for always keeping with him two secretaries, Carmela Menesky and Marion Loehr, to remind him when it is time to get started to start thinking of getting started. William McDonald has been hired by Joe Penner to take care of his famous duck who has gone into retirement. "Joe" Mooney and Andrew Little have gained national repute by cornering the gold supply and are now holding the bears and wolves of Wall Street at bay. "Hank" Griffin is spending his remaining years in living down his middle name. Prominent members of the League for Women Voters are Louise Hayward, Genevieve Webster, and Doris Crawford. "Eddie" Eastwood as head of the Eastwood Kodak Company gave first prize in its national amateur snapshot contest to Joseph Overlock. Florence Dussault was the subject. Mary O'Gara and Celia Olendrowicz are taking a special course in Home Economics. There must be two good reasons. Chester Trzcinka and Bernard Page are life insurance agents. Virginia Walker is tutoring Mary Scalise and Catherine Phelan preparatory to their going abroad. Doris Ransehausen has grown to the immense height of six feet. Santo Ranti could not stand the shock at first but he is getting used to it. Mary Ziemba holds the speed record in typing but Bertha Wilk gained the shorthand record.

Helen was finally out of news so looked around for more. Viola Kalmowsky, who had fallen heir to a jewelry store, was admiring the diamond on the hand of the demure housewife, Emma Lanphear. In the midst of their discussion Helen Keegan, a dashing young secretary to a social butterfly in New York, burst in all aflutter with the news that Mary Kidney had been engaged for a week at the Roxie Theater in New York. She was impersonating those two lovely show-girls, Elinor Hunter and Alexandria Karpeck. Antoinette Kennedy, Washington society matron, was consoling Katherine Jacoby who had to seek solace in teaching. Helen Kaylis, a salt-packer's secretary, came in with her good friend Elizabeth Kinnifick, sketch artist of New York. Lucy Johnson is telling about the pets on her farm.

In one corner talking with the dancing trapeze artists, "Al" Bachuzewski and Enrico Campoli, are Rita Archey, Henrietta Amazon, and Catherine Anderson, the Three "A" Girls, a comedy team on the radio. Edith Bartell is showing Dorothy Bridge how to be the life of the party.

"Teacie" Collins and "Bea" Bouley are playing a game of chess and as usual Carmela Coltrara is telling how she would move the chessmen. In a side room "Ray" Berger, store manager, and "Sam" Bontempo, hardware dealer, are having a friendly game of pinochle. Watching them is John Campbell, speed demon.

Doctor Arthur Chevrette and his nurse, Isabelle Brogan, were discussing Doctor Clarence Anderson's latest book entitled "How to Become Beautiful." The co-author was Dorothy Skowron.

Charlotte Aldrich a member of the "Be Kind to Animals" Club was lecturing on the subject.

Soon Dorothy Berard and Helen Cohn, two New York society women, arrived in a Rolls-Royce. Elizabeth Baginsky and Jane Palmer, both reporters from the Eagle hurried to meet them. The Socialites told us that "Bill" Carr could not get here as his orchestra was engaged to play at the "House of Blass" owned by Jeanette Blass.

Mary Blair and Sarah Bornak were trying to get business for their pet shop. "Al" Bonito, Fuller Brush Man, was explaining the uses of an electric brush to Grace Burke, whose house is immaculately clean. Mildred Carpenter and Dorothy Castle were discussing the prices, of course, of new coats and dresses.

Edna Solak and Nataka Shepsheley were laughing heartily over George Slocum's comic strip said to be a prototype of Jack Schofield. Dora Wheeler and "Edie" Tanch were arguing as to the merits of their respective methods of shorthand. Ruth Shaver was surrounded by many friends who were trying to get jobs through her. She is the employment manager at the Trumble-Touhy department store. Ruth Williams was listening to the advice of Mary Sibbio on the care of the hair. Grace Speranzo has promised to manicure her nails. Yolanda Solera is hoping she will get hers done. Sophia Naprava, public secretary at Martin Manor, was taking dictation from the outstanding capitalist, Howard Perron. Claire Ackerman, flushed with her success in "Romeo and Juliet" was receiving the plaudits of Flora Evzerow and Charles Neff and "Nick" Wowk.

Sally Dickinson and Doris Evans are getting the autograph of Eddie Cotter, world traveler. Good Luck, girls!

The Mayor of Lanesboro, Robert Deloye, and Mary Dunn are trying to find out who can identify the most people in the least time.

Entering the hotel are "Tony" and Mary Dalmaso, the sister and brother team, on "Big Time". Right behind them are Mary Root, cashier of Pittsfield's one night club, and Ralph Edwards, distinguished citizen of Lanesboro.

Over there, so interested in telling the most in the least time, are George Daverin, gag writer, Arthur Ecklund, fisherman, and Robert Emerson, defender of law and order (policeman to you).

The sophisticated young lady is Rita Dion who models the latest fashions for Madame Charlotte McCort.

Loud guffaws tell us that Catherine Donna, successor to Beatrice Lillie, is relating a few. Remember "Ant Kitty?"

Then with a flourish of hands and a huge "Oh My!" Alice Lyman, who has displaced Zasu Pitts, enters closely followed by Shirley McLean, wishing to get inspiration for a new poem.

We are very fortunate to have with us Harry Moore and Gladys Myers, who somehow got teamed up and are taking Broadway by storm.

Elsie Gould, a "Hello" girl, has been receiving calls from Mayor Anthony Guarda of New York. Due to urgent business he will be unable to attend. We imagine his "urgent" business concerns "Teddy" Grucelski's Steel Trust. Jane Hall, private secretary, phoned that she and her employer, John Powers, the successful oil magnate, will not be present.

A great transport plane landed in John Griffin's pasture. It was piloted by Robert Earle, assisted by Warren Sweeney. Helen Huff, as air-hostess, distributed Frances Sime's gum to the passengers. "Winnie" Gustafson and "Billy" Volin alighted. Julia O'Boice, the second Greta Garbo, was also a passenger.

A plane piloted by Ronald Shepard flew overhead and Donald Corley, parachute jumper, landed at our feet. He attributed his success to the parachutes designed by Miles McCarry and Franny Dwyer.

The members of the President's Cabinet came in. Secretary of State, John Farnell, carried the bags of the Secretary of the Treasury, "Flossie" DeGroff. Secretary of Agriculture, Dorothy Wallace, came in with the Secretary of Labor, Jimmy Ferry. Loitering behind is Coolidge Porterfield, who is still strong for the I. C. S.

Then as the last of this group enters, a great cloud of smoke arises and slowly disappears leaving in its wake the great master of hypnotics and other mystical sciences, Bruno Leoncini and his two attendants, Elinor McLaughlin and Ethel Nagelschmidt.

"Bob" Danckert's Ice Creamery right next door is a scene of joyous frivolity. Standing at the counter is John Gull, Gull-ping sundaes a la Millicent Gooley. Jane Gray and Annabelle Harvey are trying to find out who can drink the most soda. Cornelia Hourihan is discussing the composition of the seats with Catherine Talasco. Margaret Hogencamp is buying up Hershey bars which Mary Homich is helping her eat.

Isabel Hickingbotham is treating Beatrice Hazard and Muriel Hendra to banana splits as a result of a bet she lost.

Sack at the Manor Rita Norton, Fannie Novick, Weston Goodrich, and Francis Dorr are playing bridge, using the new system propounded by Eleanor Goetze. Mary Gattasso, Bernice Vosburgh, and Ruth Gaylord were playing "500" rummy.

Harry Francis was looking through a magazine. Ethel Earle and Nora Duda smile up from its pages. One of the stories was written by Eileen Dwyer.

Food was next in order. Among the waitresses were Geraldine Foley, Celia Garbowitz, and Katherine Pelky.

Leslie Abell, as toastmaster, introduced the outstanding dinner guests. The Pulitzer Prize winners were: David Wood for the best American novel, Robert Bufe for poetry, and Sir Giftos for the play.

Howard Braun, noted criminal lawyer, made a speech. Anna Campbell took a bow as the only American who could make the U. S. Treasury accounts balance. Eugenie Formel has successfully taught everyone to pronounce her name correctly.

Edith Scace caused a near panic by dropping all her medals on Ruth Kollman's left foot. Phyllis Trudeau ended the evening with a selection on her violin. Blanche Ropelewski and Jean Vangelisto were caught wiping their eyes.

Marie Shalett retired to Tahiti after the Prophecy was printed.

TOAST TO THE FACULTY

FOR three years we, as undergraduates of Pittsfield High School, have been literally dragged over the rocks by you teachers. Tonight the worm has turned. We are no longer members of the high school but graduates.

You have had your day. How delighted you were to see us stumble over our Virgil, translating a noun like a verb or an adverb like the subject of the sentence. How you just loved to pile on about 2 hours homework when you knew very well there was a dance that night. But tonight it's our night to howl.

Do you really know why you were asked here tonight to be the guests of the Senior A Class? You were invited not because we enjoy your pleasant company; far from it. We are now graduates seeking revenge.

Yes, on the whole, our three years have been happy ones, but believe me, they were dangerous ones, too. For instance: You might walk into Miss Kaliher's room and have an eraser bounced off your head; Miss Kaliher thinking you were Mr. Geary or one of his fellow conspirators. Or have Mr. Lynch pat you gently on the back and knock you almost through the wall. A nice playful fellow, Mr. Lynch! How well we remember asking him what class he was in. Then, of course, all our girls had to have inspiration to do their work. But instead of picking some boy in the class, they chose our handsome English teacher, Mr. Joyce. As one girl stated, "I think he's just too adorable for words." I think he's nice, too, don't you girls? Then still another set of girls, and most of the boys, have for their ideal, Mr. Herrick, the great lover of the "Taming of the Shrew".

But seriously, it is my happy privilege to express for this class our deep appreciation of the earnest effort you have made in our behalf. Our three years have been richer because of your interest and your guidance. Not today—but in the years that are ahead—will we truly realize your unselfishness.

As a class officer, I keenly appreciate the helpful advice and unfailing interest of Mr. Strout in all class activities. We have always had the utmost cooperation from Miss Parker and Mr. Ford. I wish to express our thanks to Miss Kaliher for the excellent Prom given in our honor, and to Miss Pfeiffer and all the other teachers helping to make our Class Day and Graduation a success.

To these teachers and to every other member of the faculty is due sincere thanks beyond my power of expression. Let each member of this class so conduct his future life, that it may bring credit not only to himself, but to the class of June, 1935. We beg you members of the faculty, to accept this pledge as our farewell tribute. George Haylon

TOAST TO THE BOYS

THE time has come when we must say goodbye; therefore, it is fitting and proper that we, the girls, hail you as our true comrades and friends.

We know that you have all succeeded but why? The girls have backed you in all your undertakings. Night after night we have stayed home and studied your lessons until the wee hours of morning for you. Day after day you have sat and watched us recite with a look on your face which told us you knew nothing of what we were talking about. When we tried to accomplish the tasks set before us in our study halls, you, finding us more interesting to think about and discuss than your lessons, kept us from doing ours. The last straw was making us wait so long for an invitation to the Proms and Banquets.

To sum it all up, you have hindered rather than helped our pursuit of knowledge.

There are a few things, however, for which we are greatly indebted to you. Your help, guidance, and participation in Class Day, Field Day, and the Senior Play could not be measured. Your ability to see the bright side of life has helped make our studies easier while your sportsmanship has shown us what good men the future will boast of. Without your strong leadership the school would be lost. With these qualities we are confident of your success.

Our hearts are like open books and on each page we shall carry your names and faces, your joys and sorrows, and your failure or success. Ruth Shaver

TOAST TO THE GIRLS

NOW that the learned portals of Pittsfield High School have closed behind us—now that the intellectual and social moments of revelry are over—now that our classmates will have to disband (in person, never in mind) to intermingle with the peoples of the world, to cope with the problems in the renumerate world of finance, public affairs, professions, and other fields of endeavor; it is due time we stop and pay glowing tribute to those sacrificing assiduous girls of our class, who throughout our memorable school days were an encouraging asset both scholastically and socially. The inspiring, though sometimes dull-witted animation and advice of you fair damsels have imbued us with a spirit of idealism and culture. Therefore, it is the boys' most ardent and desirous wish that the girls of our class rise to seemingly unattainable heights and have their most important aspirations fulfilled. If a basic formula could be given for success, I am sure we could say that the fair maidens of our class would possess all the constituents. The eminent Samuel Johnson once said that self-confidence is the prime requisite for great undertakings. The boys are confident of your ability to succeed—self-confidence is our advice. We salute you—

John Prodgers

SENIOR REVIEW PLAY! EW

CLASS WILL, JUNE, 1935

IN spite of considerable lobbying for complete disinheritance, we, the graduating class of June, 1935, bequeath our entire estate to the faculty and the student body of Pittsfield High School. We have already disposed of a Prom and a Senior Play. We also reserve for ourselves the right to keep and cherish our memories. The rest we have disposed of accordingly:

Miss Kahiher: Instructions on how to play that shocking instrument, the telephone.

Miss McLaughlin: Fans for the "Extase" dancers.

Mr. Strout: A long list of existing evils to bombard—after we've gone.

Miss Millet: Three little words for our class adviser; thanks, appreciation, and memories.

Senior B's: Faith, and hope, but NO charity.

Mr. Holly: Good luck with the advertising staff of THE STUDENT'S PEN.

Sophs: Some advice; the alcoves in the library aren't half bad.

Messrs. Lynch & McKenna: Pebbles to feed to aspiring orators and debaters.

Cafeteria: A motto: "Last one down st-ands".

PEN Staff: A large Circulation.

Chemistry Dept.: Theme song: "With every breath I take."

Mr. Joyce: Another shrew to tame—almost.

Book Lovers: Electrifying plot—of library floor when you shuffle your feet.

Miss Ward: License to run a nursery for P. H. S. starlets.

Coach Stewart: A cheering, (paying ?) alumni, this fall.

Miss Pfeiffer: Thanks for the pageant. Another one?

Ourselves: We hope there's an after (High School) life.

Signed and sealed with floor wax, this June 10th, 1935. Exhilarated, not accelerated; sane, not safe; while lying on our (inner spring) bed.

ADDRESS TO THE FACULTY

IT is with sad hearts that we bid you, the faculty of Pittsfield High School, farewell.

During our three years here you have continually befriended us and patiently guided us as we were striving for broader knowledge. You, who teach dull and uninteresting subjects, have presented them to us interestingly and by your winning personalities have added vivacity to them and actually made us enjoy and comprehend them.

But you have given us more than mere facts, you have earnestly labored to strengthen our characters so that we may more easily face the trials of our future life. You have made us appreciate the finer things in life—everything that is noble, true, and honorable. We have always respected you for your high ideals and limitless patience, and we are most grateful for your friendly guidance.

It will indeed be a pleasure to recall our friendly relations and we will never forget what you have done for us and how willingly and kindly you have done it. There will always be a place in our hearts for you. It is with great reluctance that we the Class of June, 1935 bid you adieu.

ADDRESS TO THE UNDERGRADUATES

Lowly Sophomores! Climbing Juniors! Worthy Senior B's!

TWO and one-half long years ago, there arrived at this renowned institution of learning a class—and a class with a capital letter. Throughout this period, we have been the one who have stood at the topmost pinnacle of high standards; the class that has been acknowledged as a leader in every field. We fully realize that such goals as have been attained by this most exceptional and brilliant assemblage of students may never, perhaps, be surpassed; but courage, comrades, "Do not falter." Though you may not so successfully accomplish what your predecessors have so well and faithfully done, may you earnestly strive for that glorious goal which shall always serve as an inspiration for your noble deeds and lofty ideals.

But, fellow-students, the hour is at hand when your kindly, helpful Senior A's must of necessity take their departure and thence to you we pass the torch of brilliant success that you may be guided by its genial light and friendly comfort. If you follow its path, we feel confident that you shall be nearly as successful as your famed predecessors. But how, ones asks (not unjustly) have we been able to achieve such renown. We recommend the following prescriptions and may you heed them wisely.

Never neglect your homework, for this only tends to aggravate the teacher and to lessen your chances of crowning glory and success.

Be attentive and strive for self-control, though it is hard, we admit, especially, for the younger Sophomores, to sit still at a desk for fifty consecutive minutes.

And last, but hardly to be considered least, it must be perfectly plain to even the most loquacious that private conversation during class time is an offense against the class and against the teacher. It was mainly through the observance of these rigid rules that we have come to the fore with glorious honors.

We wish to express our sincere gratitude to the Juniors for a most impressive prom and to all you undergraduates for your hearty support and co-operation in all our endeavors. May yours be a happy and prosperous career!

CLASS HISTORY

SEPTEMBER 12, 1932! The day had arrived when old P. H. S. was to receive within its sacred portals the most illustrious Sophomore class of all time!

Up the pearly steps we trod with our "shining morning faces," a rosy red apple in our hand and a brand new pencil box tucked carefully in our satchel. With eager hearts we crossed the threshold in our joyous quest for higher knowledge.

What a carefree life we would lead here where work would be as play and hours of study would fly quickly past. But alas! What a disillusionment! Instead of these halcyon days we were submitted to hours of drudgery. Our instructors were of the opinion that there was no limit to human endurance. Madonna-like teachers suddenly became werewolves in disguise and piled on homework unmercifully. As Sophomores it is conceded that perhaps we did not make such an impression (or else weren't fully appreciated.) But, it must be allowed that it takes some time for even the most brilliant class to become acclimated.

It was as Junior A's that we first began to show keen judgment in selecting Francis Lusignan, president; Winston Roulier, vice president; Mary O'Boyle, secretary, and Florence DeGross, treasurer, as our able class officers. Even to the happy choice of a class advisor we used our "gray matter" in electing Miss Helen Millet, who has been so helpful a pal in guiding us. Still, even Miss Millet is proud to be the advisor of such a class as ours.

Our formal debut was made at the Junior Prom in June, 1933, which everyone admits was the best yet, thanks to Bud Holden, general chairman, and his very able assistants.

In our second class election, as Senior B's, we chose the same group of officers, with the exception of the vice presidency which we entrusted to Thomas Enright. As chairman of the ring committee we selected Winston Roulier. Bob Ford, the gentleman with a soul, elected chairman of the Goodwill Committee, distributed sunshine most ably.

As Senior A's the same capable officers took over the reins, with one exception, the vice-presidency, which was this time voted to George Haylon.

Again our class triumphed in its presentation of "Nothing But The Truth" in which Bud Producers and Winnie Gustafson so ably enacted the leading roles of this, our Senior Play. Miss Margaret Ward proved her genius in bringing out to the full extent the acting abilities of the entire cast. The "villainous" chairman of this overwhelming success was in the person of Charles Giftos.

The versatile Thomas Enright, our class day chairman, has worked assiduously, under the supervision of Miss Madeline Pfeiffer, to make our Class Day the quintessence of them all!

Our high foreheads and noble features have been lined up by the photographer as a permanent record of high intelligence that future classes may hold as their ideal. Joseph Majchrowski has been made chairman of this history-making project.

Toward the closing weeks of our stay here it would seem only fitting that ones as efficient as Virginia Bickford and Mary O'Boyle be chosen as Editor-in-chief and Business Manager respectively of the commencement issue of THE STUDENT'S PEN.

It is with a mingling of feeling that we take our leave of Pittsfield High School for we know that never again will we find its equal. While we may have suffered disillusionments as Sophomores, we now realize that all the severe tests to which you have submitted us have been for our own welfare and we know how well we have been prepared for the future.

Now we are at the parting of the ways and we who are about to leave here assure you, Pittsfield High School, that always in our heart of hearts we will cherish a sincere love and gratitude for you, our dear Alma Mater.

AN ACCOUNT OF CLASS DAY

THE talking and whispering died to a low rumble of sound as the "Honorable Seniors" in their stately black robes filed past, and took their places in the front of the auditorium. This was Class Day; the time, June 10. A hush fell over the student body as the Seniors seated themselves and the undergraduates sat back, expecting to witness a typical Class Day program. But before five minutes had elapsed, everyone was sitting on the edge of his seat, tense with excitement and interest. For this Class Day was totally different—unlike any previous performance.

As the curtain opens the hands of time speed backward with incredible swiftness until we are witnessing a Pittsfield town meeting, in April, 1850. For a time we quiver lest the Yankee sense of thrift best the people in their desire to educate their children. Finally, however, the necessary appropriation for the first high school is passed (with a dangerously slim majority) and Pittsfield's higher education is born.

A little later we gaze upon the opening of this first high school. How few studies are open to the entering pupils! What strict supervision is kept over the pupils! We cannot but appreciate more fully the enlightened school that is ours.

Next on the program is an early graduation—about 1880. Although each class has comparatively few students, the graduation program itself is infinitely harder on those who were bright enough to obtain their diplomas. Imagine singing a solo before a full audience in the old Academy of Music, or giving a valedictory completely in Latin. (All those who wish to experience either of the above, see Ray Carmel or Barbara Washburn.)

Slowly this scene fades and in its place appears an early Junior Promenade—about 1890. With just a brief respite while we notice the costumes of that period. Father Time resumes his maddening pace of traveling over eighty years in less than two hours.

1918—The World War. Here we see some of the activities in which our high school played its part; perhaps we too can appreciate "our boys over there".

What's this? The scene is familiar; we've seen it before. Yes, of course, it's the laying of the cornerstone of our present building. There's Mr. Strout, all dressed up for the occasion. Somehow his face seems to remind me of some orchestral drummer that I saw somewhere. Oh, and Mr. Goodwin (how Sir Giftos has grown these past few days!) is there! A few tense moments, and the heavy stone "is laid", without the smashing of anybody's fingers.

The last episode takes the form of a tableau. We see represented many different nationalities; and we realize that our school not only teaches but also serves as a great melting pot. The program closes when America enters, accompanied by the singing of America the Beautiful.

Thus ended one of the most striking Class Days that we have ever witnessed, a Class Day, perhaps, that has never been more enthusiastically received by the students as a whole.

No account of presentation would be complete without the mention of the one who made it such an overwhelming success—Miss Pfeiffer.

THE CAST OF "NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH"

ARTFULLY VERACIOUS—

"Bud" Producers as Bob Bennett in unvarnished candor told the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

DYNAMIC—

"Ray" Carmell in the role of E. M. Ralston gave a vehement and truly artistic performance.

CAUSTICALLY QUIZZICAL—

Richard Donnelly nonchalantly portrayed by "Bud" Holden was persistent in demanding the truth.

SLEEK—

Charles Giftos, who took the part of Clarence VanDeusen, by unscrupulous means satisfied his mercenary character.

INGENIOUS—

Robert Ford in all the innocence of the clerical Bishop Doran proved a "howling" success.

ECSTATICALLY DELIGHTFUL—

Winifred Gustafson as Gwen Ralston in her chic blue gown, was captivatingly amiable.

FEMININELY FRILLY—

Virginia Bickford was the lavish provisor of typical abstractions in Ethel Clark.

SKILLFULLY DOMINANT—

Mary Kidney typically enacted the scheming jealous wife in the role of Mrs. Ralston.

AVARICIOUS—

Mable and Sable Jackson, the girls from the "country," made good in their way. They were played by Florence Moffie and Barbara Heidel, respectively.

DEMURE—

Margaret Knight served the family graciously.

We owe the skillful presentation of our play to the unselfish efforts of Miss Margaret Ward, the director. Her successful coaching produced the best senior play in our school's history, as evidenced by the unflagging attention of the audience. The cast abetted this by their wholehearted cooperation and their mature characterization of the individual roles. In view of the fact that high school plays are preconceived to be amateurish in their presentations, we feel that this was the exception to the rule. The play committee, in its selection of J. M. Montgomery's comedy, "Nothing But the Truth" showed a practical understanding of what would be appreciated by both a high school and adult audience.

Of course, without a publicity committee no play could be a success, so we attribute a large part of this play's success to our able publicity committee. Very often, there is a certain group of hard workers behind the scenes of a play, which never gets the entire credit due it in contributing to the scenic effects of the play. This group is the stage crew, and a better one than ours never hoisted a set. A toast to the stage crew of "Nothing But The Truth"!

Miss Powers: "How would you say in Shakespearean language, 'Here comes a bow-legged man?'"

Bob Slater: "Oh, what is that that cometh in parentheses?"

Mr. Goodwin: "Why don't you answer me?"

Howie Perron: "I did, I shook my head."

Mr. Goodwin: "Heavens, you don't expect me to hear the rattle way up here, do you?"

Miss McCormick: "Did you ever read the 'Pickwick Papers'?"

None Other Than Ray Carmell: "No, what do I care what goes on in those hick towns?"

SPORTS EULOGY

SPEAK not of the heroes of vanquished Troy, nor of the courageous of ancient Sparta, nor of the demigods of mighty Rome. But weep, ye women of P. H. S., and beat thy breasts, ye men of Pittsfield. Let thy groans shake the very pillars of the Earth and resound from pole to pole, from zenith to nadir. For behold the lengthy list of valiants departing from thy midst, nevermore to bear the Purple and White standard to glorious victory. Behold them, soldiers, who, like true Greeks, never left the field of battle without their shields.

See them as they march through the portals of graduation. There is Alexander Bachuzewski, he of the prodigious name and athletic feats on track and court. Alex has high aims in life,—he is a pole vaulter. A broken wrist unfortunately has kept Alex from recent combat, but he has hoarded away two letters for track and basketball service.

Next in line is versatile George Betts, whose forte is probably football, but who can play a good game of basketball when in the mood. And—oh yes,—a bit of warning to any aspiring young ladies,—he hurls a mean discus and shot. George has track, football, and basketball letters.

Albert Bonito marches by, a lesser luminary perhaps, but certainly deserving of a place in the athletic firmament. We don't recall that Alby ever won a letter, but he worked assiduously in the line for the football eleven, getting into some games, and occasionally this year, he has patrolled an outer garden for the nine.

Raymond Carmell of "Nothing But the Truth" fame follows. Ray, big and strong, was a stellar linesman on the '34 football machine, and a capable weight man for the tracksters.

George Edward Cotter, a late addition to our ranks, had little time in which to display his athletic wares, but anyway, was a discus tosser on the track squad.

Although good-natured Ralph Edwards never sewed a P on his jersey, we feel that he deserves mention in this account. He belongs to that long list of unfortunate (?) good sports who play for the love of the sport, or school spirit, or some intangible something, without reward. To this list belong also elongated William Mann, Robert Slater, and Stanley Martin.

James Aloysius Ferry next strolls by, somewhat stooped over with the burden of four letters crowded onto his spacious chest. Jim broad-jumped his way to the track insignia and pastimed with the baseball nine last Spring, in the Fall squeezed into the varsity line, and later cut capers for the basketball five in a forward berth. At present you can find him covering shortstop for the varsity nine.

Robert Ford received an award as a football linesman and earned a letter as manager of the hockey team.

John Fraser won his letter in football, playing a good game in the line. Occasionally he held down the third base job on the baseball squad.

John Gull, appendicitis victim, is well known to sport enthusiasts. His fame he spread on gridiron and basketball court. In football, as stentorian-voiced quarterback, he skillfully directed plays, exhorted his team, and made some fine runs. In basketball, he played a steady guard position, alert and aggressive. Appendicitis prevented his appearance with the basketeers during the past season.

George Hill also needs no introduction to sport fans. His antics on the polished surface of the basketball court, and his ability as a runner and jumper attracted considerable attention. Bunker was selected as center on THE PEN's All-Berkshire basketball team.

Gordon Holden displays a letter earned on the cinder path. Bud was a good hurdler in his junior year, but failed to report for this season.

Diminutive Irving Hughes, hampered by injuries, has never been fully able to display his abilities as a halfback. Two years ago last Fall, he showed promises, but last year the casualty list claimed him and forced him out of the wars. However, we believe he possesses a letter.

George Krause, left-handed twirler for Coach Stewart's latest baseball edition, has hopes of winning a letter in this sport. Krass showed up well in practice, and has enough on the ball to rate a trial. Perhaps, by publication, he will have won the much-desired P.

No summation of our warriors' deeds should be considered complete without mention of dynamic Dalard LeBlanc. Dallo received no major P, but his sparkling somersaults, and gasp-provoking gyrations in the gym have gained recognition for him. Dallo captured fourth place in tumbling in the Lowell gym meet.

Joseph Machrowski sports a letter, the reward of splendid service in the outfield for the baseball unit. Joe swings an ever-dangerous mace, and gathers in flies with ease and surety.

Anthony Marra is no flickering star in the great constellation of '35 athletes. Tony's end play in football thrilled and delighted spectators. His aggressiveness and ability to part the nets made him a valuable member of the basketball five.

Francis Mylnarczyk is another of our gridiron greats. An elusive runner and demonic line plunger; Frankie turned in several brilliant jaunts during his playing career. Outstanding in memory is his stellar performance in the St. Joseph contest on Thanksgiving Day. In basketball, Frankie was a guard, rugged, dependable, and dexterous in handling the ball.

The Munsons, Wallace and Warren, are perhaps not so well known to followers of Sport, but nevertheless excellent performers in their line of athletics,—hockey. They handle their sticks skillfully, follow the puck with hawk-like persistence, and are ardent enthusiasts of the ice game.

John Prodgors was an end extraordinaire. His savage tackling, zest, and earnestness left little to be desired in his performances. Bud was an All-Berkshire selection of THE PEN, and was chosen on the second All-Western Mass. eleven. As a guard in basketball, he displayed the same vigorous qualities and played a steady, defensive game in the back court.

Francis Roberts was awarded an insignia for capable and efficient service done as manager of the track team.

Ralph Simmons, as a football player, has few equals. For three years he has plugged holes in the Purple and White line, rent gaping apertures in opponents' walls, thrown runners hard and viciously to the turf. He was All Western Mass. in his junior year, but appendicitis kept him off that mythical roster last season. He was a captain in two sports, football and hockey, playing goalie on the sextet.

Last in line, but only because his name begins with a W, is Harold Williams. Hal showed up extremely well as a wingman on the eleven and as a slugging outfielder on the nine. He was fast and sincere in both sports.

In closing it is meet and just that we should express appreciation to Coaches Carmody and Stewart for providing this, our class, and our school, with so many able-bodied upholders of our name. We feel as if their conscientious efforts have not been in vain, and hope that P. H. S. in the future will not be, like Samson bereft of his hair, too greatly weakened by our departure, but will flourish with a new crop of athletes almost as good!

Thomas Enright

GIRLS' SPORTS REVIEW

IN reviewing girls' sports for the class of 1935, we point with pardonable pride to the fine record we have achieved during our three years at P. H. S. Track, swimming, basketball, baseball, hockey, archery, and tennis,—each has claimed its enthusiasts.

Though a few of our members may go on to greater heights in the field of athletics, for the majority of us, the memory of friendships made, the thrill of a game well-played and a deeper understanding of true sportsmanship will be adequate reward for the time we have devoted to our various gymnastic interests.

At the head of our list of feminine athletes stands Edith Scace. Edith participated in sports with zest and earnestness. Winning a track meet, playing first team basketball, baseball and hockey were all in the course of a day to this all-around athlete. Edith's undeniable good nature won her the admiration and friendship of many.

Second only to Edith is Yolanda Solera. "Skeezix" as she is better known in the gym, starred in basketball, baseball, hockey, and track. This versatile young player is well known to all of us.

Among our track stars we number Claire Ackerman, Eugenie Formel, and Sophie Naprava. Claire's long legs carried her to second place in track meets during both her sophomore and senior years. Eugenie Formel placed third in the senior meet. Although "Genie" has no aspirations toward Olympics, her whole-hearted enthusiasm and support of athletics has made her a favorite to frequenters of the gym. Sophie Naprava, as a squad leader in '34, also placed second in the senior track meet. A vote of thanks to these three track stars who did much to prove to a group of cynical sophs that all seniors are not too old and rheumatic for such vigorous sport.

If you are an admirer of good all-around sports, we give you Carolyn Cullen and Christine Parker. These girls spent their spare time in improving their muscular ability ever since their sophomore days. In fact, tradition tells us that on the day of entrance they found their way straight to the gym and were very much disgusted when a horrid home room teacher endeavored to explain in no uncertain terms that home rooms were the usual places to report. Carolyn was a squad leader in '34 and '35, and played both baseball and hockey throughout her high school career. Christine, who is one of the most likeable persons we know, played basketball in her sophomore and junior years, baseball for three years, and hockey in her last year.

Jane Gray and Betty Silvernail gave their time and ability to the basketball teams. Jane was a member of the team in her sophomore year, and Betty, in her senior year. They were both guards and few were the baskets made when they were in the game. A couple of hoops to Betty and Jane.

Scouts from the Giants (Athletic Club) haunted the rear yard of our school this year in the hope of being rewarded with a glimpse of Phyllis Trudeau's pitching. Something really must be done about the unwritten law which bars women from big league baseball but allows scouts to steal pointers for their players. However, in spite of her wicked incurves and outcurves, Phyllis is a modest lass and does her best to persuade us that she is really not so very much better than "Dizzy" Dean. We remain unconvinced.

"Quips and cranks and wanton wiles" may have no place on the athletic field, but "Mickey" Flynn has. Her mother named her Margaret, but even she was forced to admit that such dignity was a trifle ludicrous when attached to such a bit of mirth and impudence. Mickey is first of all a swimmer and her services on the purple and white team for three years have done much to forward its success. When Mickey wasn't practising breast stroke at the Boy's Club, she found time to act as squad leader and play on both the junior baseball team and the senior hockey team.

Beatrice Bouley was one of our outstanding basketball players. She captained the junior basketball team in '34 and was also a member of the senior combine. With "Bee" as captain, it is no wonder that the girls should have won the basketball championship that year. It is rumored about that "Bee" was a very fine player before she came to P. H. S. from Dalton—you know, that little "hamlet" which lies five miles east of us?

We offer as a rival to Helen Jacobs, our tennis star, Rosemary Cummings. "Rosie's" untiring efforts in this field of sport were rewarded when she defeated one after another of her opponents in the tournaments of '34 and '35. Although she lost the championships of both years, we are indeed very proud of "Rosie".

One of the names which occurs immediately to the mind of a swimming enthusiast is that of Claire Germaine. She swam backcrawl for P. H. S. three years and brought honor both to herself and to her team. A lifesaver to Claire! Another backstroker who brought fame to our purple and white team this year is Marion Sinclair. A couple of grand troupers!

Helen Weeks, Bette Owen, and Mary Dunn were all members of the swimming team during their sophomore year, but later found other interests. Mary further distinguished herself by serving as a squad leader and by making the junior baseball and senior hockey teams. "Jackie" Weeks was also a squad leader in her sophomore year and a squad leader and member of the baseball team in her junior year. And even though "Jackie" went "way down yonder in the cornfield" (Alabama) this past winter, she returned to us yankees without an accent!

Another of P. H. S.'s victorious mermaids was Barbara Gamwell. In addition to swimming backcrawl—and doing a good job of it too—"Bob" was a squad leader and a member of the senior hockey team. Her many puns were most eloquent when issuing from the shower.

Louise Hayward and Virginia Walker also belonged to the squad leader group. Both girls made the junior baseball and senior hockey teams.

And so as the June Class of 1935 passes through the portals of P. H. S. we pay a solemn tribute to the girl athletes. They have, by their shining example of clean sportsmanship, hearty co-operation, and sincere good will, endeared themselves to all. An orchid to each and everyone—may they enjoy in life all that they are due.

PAGEANT—The History of Pittsfield High School

Episode I—The Town Meeting of 1850

(In 1850 the proposal to appropriate $3,000 for the establishment of a high school met with little opposition. This scene represents the spirit that prevailed for some years previous to 1850. The arguments are taken from the town records.)

Episode II—The Opening of the High School, November, 1850

(This scene is based on early school committee reports. The examination questions are taken from actual examinations given to applicants for entrance to the high school.)

Episode III—An Early Graduation, circa 1876

(The speeches used in this scene are authentic graduation speeches from early graduation programs. They are, of necessity, greatly condensed.)

Episode IV—The Beginning of Social Activities, circa 1895

Episode V—P. H. S. in the World War, 1918

(The letters used in this episode are actual letters written during the war by Pittsfield High School boys who had joined the colors.)

Episode VI—The Laying of the Corner Stone of the Present Building, 1930

Episode VII—The High School of Today

(The audience is requested to join in the singing of "America the Beautiful" at the close of the pageant.)

CLASS SONG

(TUNE: "When I Grow Too Old To Dream")

Verse I:

Saying goodbye,
Dear Pittsfield High,
Brings back the mem'ries of days that have flown;
Down thru the years,
We'll smile thru our tears,
Thinking of joys we have known.

Verse II:

All things must end,—
All pathways bend,—
And every class must make way for the new;
Though we may stray,
To lands far away,
Still will our mem'ries be true.

Chorus:

Days with you—dear Pittsfield High,
Deep in mem'ry will linger,
All too soon they hurry by,
The friends—the joys that we knew.
So hail and farewell,
We bid thee adieu;
But come what may beyond the years,
We'll still be thinking of you.

(Words by Mary O'Boyle)

ON GRADUATION

Oh, I don't want to graduate
I'm having too much fun;
I hate to think my high school days
Are pretty nearly done.

I'll have to pay at football games,
Won't get my STUDENT'S PEN,
While basketball and lollypops
Won't seem the same again.

I'll never loaf in study halls,
Or break the rules at lunch
By smuggling candy past the doors,
In class to slyly munch.

I'll never waste assembly time
By clapping loud and long,
While hoping class will be delayed
'Til lunchtime's welcome gong.

I'll never razz the Sophomores,—
Might even envy them, —
How sad to think a Senior A
Could come to such an end!

And when the Juniors gravely say,
"Outsiders not allowed!"
And students gaily flock to Proms,
I'll never join the crowd.

Gee, I don't want to graduate,—
(I'd better stop this plea,
Else some obliging pedagogue
Might fix it up for me!)

If you are going away to college this fall . . .

your friends will be interested in your various college activities and The Eagle will help to keep them informed of them through its news columns. You will be as much interested in the news of your friends you leave behind you.

Having The Eagle sent to you while in college is better than a daily letter from home. We have a special rate for your college year of $4 for the daily Eagle and $1 for the weekly.

You have only to phone 7311 to place such a subscription.
